General Comment

I feel that the proposed regualtions for the Genetic Information Nondiscrimination Act (GINA), would be a smart and logical thing to accomplish. The additional information that groups or companies gather about a persons genetic background should have nothing to do with the decision of whether they get coverage or how much that coverage would cost.
I have to agree with the Paperless Reduction Act, because without all of the additional information that is collected, it would lessen the amount of paperwork that is needed when dealing with coverage of groups or individuals.
